THE ALL AMERICANS

The Team that Will Compete with Anson's Men.

The Chicago and All American baseball clubs signed on their respective contracts [illegible] Sunday. The former are the champions of the League, and the latter are the champions of the West. The All Americans are composed of the best players in the West, and are [illegible] by Ward and Farnum of New York, who are now organizing a team of [illegible] players. The All Americans will play [illegible] Chicago, and will [illegible] Ward's strongest men.

Ward is the pitcher of the New York team, and Farnum plays second base. Both are [illegible] players. Ward is also captain of the team. Farnum is a brother of Jack Farnum, the [illegible] that played and successfully played third base. Both of these players greatly aided the Providence team not only in winning the championship of the National League in 1879, but in maintaining a prominent position in the league's second series of games.

Ward was the pitcher of a professional team that visited New Orleans during the winter of 1879-80, and the writer had a good deal of [illegible] with him. He was born in Bellaire, O., and is [illegible] years old. He is a graduate of Columbia college, having graduated with honors and received the degree of LL. D. from the law school, and was also awarded the second prize in the school of physical culture. He was married Oct. [illegible], 1879, to Miss Helen Dingray. He will soon, it is said, practice [illegible] the legal profession in New York City, having retired from the ball field.

Harry Simpson is one of the best known men in baseball circles. He was a member of the Newark cricket club. In 1858 he organized the Newark Base Ball association and for [illegible] years made a fine record as a base ball player. He then went into and successfully managed a [illegible] and manager of the well known Atlantic cricket club, a social professional club of which he is proud to have been [illegible]. Mr. Simpson is a business man and a [illegible] politician. He is a [illegible] by his strictly temperate habits. His steady application to business and [illegible] ways has won for himself a [illegible] position high in the estimation of his [illegible] in America. As an organizer and manager he has few superiors. He would be a very valuable man for [illegible] and associations in Australia or [illegible] playing the American game of baseball as [illegible] and instructor.

Donnelly played as a member of the Washington (D. C.) team since the season of 1882, and has won an admirable reputation as a ball player. His position is second base, and as a third baseman he ranks with the best in the whole league. He is 24 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighs 155 pounds. This short has not many times been [illegible] among the best ball players in America.

John Healey is looked upon as one of the puzzling pitchers of the league, and has a strong [illegible] in the box. He is [illegible] years old, 6 feet 3 inches tall, and weighs 200 pounds. He has been one of Boston's mainstays for the past three years. His magical curves while in the box have struck terror to the hearts of Detroit wielders as "Baby" Anson, "Old Only" Mike, Johnny Ward and others. His skill with the stick has also won favorable commented upon.

Keenan has made a great reputation as a ball player since he became a member of the New York team at the outset of the season of 1880. As a batsman he has especially distinguished himself, and as outfielder the management of the New York team claim that he has no superior. In 1880 he played with the Trenton and Jersey City teams as a pitcher. He was conceded at that time to be one of the best left handed "twirlers" in the country.

Fogarty is one of the best known out-fielders of the National league. His position with the Philadelphia team being that of right field. He joined the Philadelphia team in 1881, and his work for it has never since been of a very high order. Prior to signing with Philadelphia Fogarty played with the Waverly club of San Francisco, then recognized as one of the crack teams of the Pacific coast. He is a strong base runner, a good batsman, can play an infield or outfield position and do [illegible] well.

George Wood is another great outfield player. He worked for the Philadelphia team club during the past two seasons, having been engaged by it to win for him an enviable reputation as a ball player. His career [illegible] in 1878 at Lynn, Mass. He [illegible] Worcester, Mass., [illegible] 1879, and was with the Detroits in 1881, including. In 1882 he signed with the Philadelphias. Wood is a Boston. He was born there in 1858. He [illegible] and is five feet ten inches in height. Since agreeing to join the Anson team he has been receiving [illegible] consideration of having [illegible] of the crack players of the [illegible].

The Albany Argus says "Sidney Smith once said that Daniel Webster struck him much like a steam engine in trousers. That is the impression Warner Miller is creating upon the people of New York state. Never before was there such a canvass of this state as he is making. It is full of brains, energy, fearless and honesty. Opposed to this brainy, fearless and honest campaign of Miller's, is the boodle, saloon campaign of David Bennett Hill. And yet utterly opposed as the latter is to every moral sentiment and every idea of decent government, there is a question about the success of the republican ticket in New York."

The Denver News is very much afraid that the sheriff of Arapahoe county and the chief of police of Denver will interfere in the coming election. It says: "The News takes it for granted, however, that the people of this county will not submit to ballot dozing at anyone's hands, and that the sheriff and chief of police will be promptly rebuked if that thing is a federal election at which the issues of the state and those of the county will be fully covered and under the friendly direction of Judge Hallett's court." This is the old bugaboo of the democracy. Ever since the interposition of the United States troops to secure a fair election in 1876 prevented the illegal casting of the electoral votes of three southern states for Mr. Tilden the democrats have been opposed to any interference from the civil authority.

Our merchants, banks and corporations should remember that the Gazette Printing company has the best facilities for the manufacture of blank books and the printing of blanks of any office between the Mississippi river and the Pacific coast. Many of our people have no idea of the extent of our business. There were over 300 rolls of wall paper sold Saturday, not less than 25 packages of envelopes. The amount of wrapping paper sold for the week was between seven and eight hundred dollars. More money is paid out for wages in the office than in any other manufacturing industry in the city. There can be no advantage either in quality of work or in price in favor of outside of the city. The patent flat opening blank book which we noticed a few days ago is now being introduced throughout the state and everywhere receives the best possible commendation.

Capt. M. L. De Graw's well known custom of courtesy has advertised Leadville for hotels in all the world. Pueblo's addition to the city's attractiveness has heretofore been noted. Colorado Springs' property has been the discussion of the globe for the location of new [illegible] in the valley of the Monument creek. Thitherto the advantage claimed has been the wide channel that the stream occupied. Even in the severe storm of '87 it could not have been filled by the debris. It was then flooded by the water that a narrow channel could not carry off. Besides this the bed of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad bridge and the straightening of the channel north of the bridge by private parties and south of the bridge by the Rock Island insure no repetition of the flooding even in case there was a good deal more water than came down in the fall of 1887 and 1888. Engineer DeCamp has shown a great deal of energy in the carrying out of the property. Whatever taxes and public grants are made to such property should be well considered. They will attempt to carry votes in Denver, but our people have thoroughly identified themselves with the various districts, and do not believe that much can be worked to any extent this way.

"The democrats themselves are getting discouraged. Those who are posted as to the conclusion of officers have given up hope of the result in Indiana. A few weeks ago, all the democrats wanted to bet, now those who have backed out of them as quickly as they can get to hedge. Ten days and no small work for now nobody has any money to bet on Indiana's success, and in fact all of the money which is coming this way is now [illegible] Democrats themselves say that they will be satisfied if they can get Indiana by 5,000 majority. I should not like to be compelled to make a bet on Indiana."

"Where are the gains to come?"

"They are all over the state. In the new manufacturing districts there will be a small increase, and there will be at least the usual democratic majorities. Here are the gains as I estimate them. A large portion of the German democrats are going to vote the republican ticket, and there will be at least the usual democratic majorities for the republican candidate as were given in 1884. A great many Irishmen of prominence, who have always worked for the democratic party in years past are now working with us, and are accomplishing grand results. I also know some leading man—a workingman—who has a list of nearly one hundred Germans which he has won over. Efforts like that you see will count to some thing, and such work is going on all over the state."

"What are the principal reasons for the change?"

"The tariff issue is the main thing that brings us recruits from the democracy, but General Harrison's personal popularity brings us a good many. A large accession from the hitherto democratic Grand Army men is due to Cleveland's pension vetoes. A good many democrats have been influenced against the president also, on account of his civil service hypocrisy and his persecution of the administration by secret letters to Cleveland. The growing lack of confidence in Cleveland and the firm faith of the people in Harrison are elements which are keeping to make a great republican victory."
